

All Seasons Fund (UNAVX) Commentary
July 2024

The All Seasons Fund ended the month of July with a return of -2.05%.

Market Review

In July, equity prices experienced a rotational shift of the market leaders from mega-cap technology stocks to small-cap stocks. Based on implied Fed Fund futures markets, signs of cooling inflation and a weaker jobs market increased the odds of a Federal Reserve rate cut this year and increased the likelihood of an economic soft landing. This July-specific change in investor sentiment has been dubbed “The Great Rotation.”

Thus far, August markets indicate little follow-through on major leadership changes away from mega-cap to small-cap stocks. We believe the important lesson from July is that markets are dynamic, and the current trends, whatever they may be, can change rapidly in a month’s time. In this case, the sky-high expectations for mega-cap quarterly earnings did not help the bull investors’ case.

The bond market's two- and 10-year Treasury yields fell 46 and 32 basis points, respectively. The yield curve also became less inverted over the month. Moreover, Federal Reserve Chair Jerome Powell left a September rate cut firmly on the table, which bodes well for a soft economic landing. After the Producer Price Index and Consumer Price Index releases in mid-August, we believe the Fed will cut by at least twenty-five basis points in September.

As markets move into the historically volatile presidential election cycle, options prices suggest slightly higher volatility through the November election. The All Seasons fund typically has more actionable trading opportunities in higher-volatility environments. In any case, we remain true to the Fund objective across all markets.

Sincerely yours,

Paul Strehle

Fund Objective:

The Fund seeks capital appreciation and capital preservation with lower volatility throughout market cycles – highly correlated with the Standard & Poor’s (“S&P”) 500® Index in bull markets, and less or negatively correlated in bear markets.

Definitions:

Bull: A bull is an investor who thinks the market, a specific security, or an industry is poised to rise. Investors who adopt a bull approach purchase securities under the assumption that they can sell them later at a higher price.

S&P 500 Index: An unmanaged composite of 500 large capitalization companies. This index is widely used by professional investors as a performance benchmark for large-cap stocks. You cannot invest directly in an index.

Volatility - The degree of variation of a trading price series over time, usually measured by the standard deviation of logarithmic returns.

Performance data quoted prior to October 13, 2017 represents the past performance of the Goldman Navigator Fund, L.P., a limited partnership (the "Predecessor Partnership"). From its inception on February 1, 2002 through October 13, 2017, the Predecessor Partnership maintained investment policies, objectives, guidelines, and restrictions that were, in all material respects, equivalent to those of the Fund. The Predecessor Partnership was not registered under the 1940 Act, and was not subject to certain investment limitations, diversification requirements, and other restrictions imposed by the 1940 Act and the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended (the "Code"), which, if applicable, may have adversely affected its performance. On a going forward basis after October 13, 2017, the Fund's performance will be calculated using the standard formula set forth in rules promulgated by the SEC, which differs in certain respects from the methods used to compute total returns for the Predecessor Partnership. Mutual fund investing involves risk; principal loss is possible. Leveraging may exaggerate the effect on net asset value of any increase or decrease in the market value of a Fund's portfolio. Investing in derivatives may subject the Fund to losses if the derivatives do not perform as expected. Short sales involve selling a security that a Fund borrows and does not own. Short sales carry significant risk, including the risk of loss if the value of a security sold short increases prior to the scheduled delivery date, since a Fund must pay more for the security than it has received from the purchaser in the short sale. Futures contracts are subject to the same risks as the underlying investments that they represent, but also may involve risks different from, and possibly greater than, the risks associated with investing directly in the underlying investments. The Funds may invest in foreign securities which involve greater volatility and political, economic and currency risks and differences in accounting methods. This risk increases with emerging markets. Small and mid-size companies involve additional risks such as limited liquidity and greater volatility. Investments in futures may result in a substantial loss in a short period. One cannot invest directly in an index. *The USA Mutuals Funds are distributed by Northern Lights Distributors, LLC, member FINRA/SIPC.
