How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

During the 12-month period ended March 31, 2025, the Vice Fund's Investor Class was up +4.28%, the Vice Fund's Class A (without sales charge) was up +4.32%, the Vice Fund's Class C (without sales charge) was up +3.50%, and the Vice Fund's Institutional Class was up +4.57%. The Fund's benchmark MSCI ACWI Index was up +7.63%.

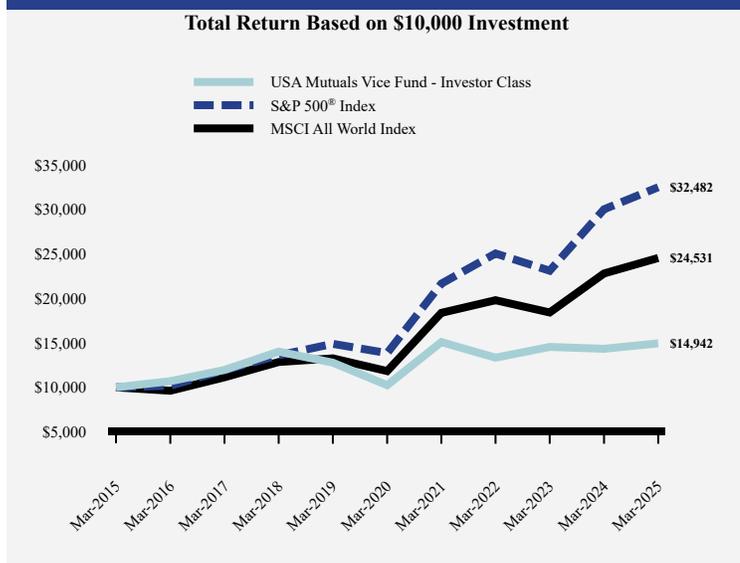

In the Portfolio Manager's view, the Fund underperformed its benchmark due to three developments over the period.

- 1) The Fund invests primarily in dividend-bearing value stocks with limited exposure to growth stocks. Mega cap technology growth stocks ran higher throughout the period.
- 2) Exposure to Chinese gaming stocks continued to drag on the portfolio as the unwinding of China's Zero Covid policy has taken longer than expected.
- 3) The Fund's exposure to consumer discretionary stocks was another drag due to rising inflation.

Despite this year's underperformance, the Portfolio Manager believes its ongoing investment in the potentially inelastic military defense, tobacco, and alcohol industries may provide a tailwind relative to cyclical stocks. In short, the customers of these products have historically continued to buy their products independent of higher costs or tariffs. However, earnings may dampen in a prolonged tariff war.

Further, the Portfolio Manager believes military defense companies are poised for more government contracts with the rise of geopolitical flare-ups. While these flare-ups are a sobering aspect of today's clash of civilizations; the Fund has historically invested heavily in military defense that protects democracies around the world.
