

All Seasons Fund (UNAVX) Commentary
September 2021

For the month of September, the All Seasons Fund lost -5.07%.

Market Review

September global equity markets were down as several risk factors weighed on the rally. The political and regulatory risk environment in China spread beyond technology stocks. China proposed greater oversight on of the casino stocks in Macau which were down sharply mid-month. This put a damper on potential Western investment in China with an uncertain outcome. Further, China's Evergrande developer crisis raised concerns of potential contagion to other frothy real estate markets around the world. In short, markets were weighed by concerns about whether the risks were mainly regional or widespread.

In the United States, politicians continued to debate whether to raise the debt ceiling. This created fear of a default. Congress did pass a stopgap spending bill that will keep the government open until December 3rd. This extension is occurring with ongoing debate around President Biden's stimulus initiatives, and implied volatility for November is higher than near term volatility as a result.

On the economic front, Federal Reserve Chair Jerome Powell said the tapering could begin as soon as the next meeting and did not refer to the recent inflationary pressures as "transitory". This added further headwinds to an uncertain equities market and sent the 10 Year Yield higher.

Despite a down month for the Fund, the Fund seeks less or negatively correlation in bear markets. While September is only one month, we believe the increase in market uncertainty potentially offers opportunities for our tactical strategy or an alternative to long-only equity Funds.

Sincerely yours,

Paul Strehle

Mutual fund investing involves risk; principal loss is possible. Leveraging may exaggerate the effect on net asset value of any increase or decrease in the market value of a Fund's portfolio. Investing in derivatives may subject the Fund to losses if the derivatives do not perform as expected. Short sales involve selling a security that a Fund borrows and does not own. Short sales carry significant risk, including the risk of loss if the value of a security sold short increases prior to the scheduled delivery date since a Fund must pay more for the security than it has received from the purchaser in the short sale. Futures contracts are subject to the same risks as the underlying investments that they represent, but also may involve risks different from, and possibly greater than, the risks associated with investing directly in the underlying investments. The Funds may invest in foreign securities which involve greater volatility and political, economic and currency risks and differences in accounting methods. This risk increases with emerging markets. Small and mid-size companies involve additional risks such as limited liquidity and greater volatility. Investments in futures may result in a substantial loss in a short period. The loss may be more than the original investment. One cannot invest directly in an index.
