

Vice Fund (VICEX) Commentary September 2024

The Vice Fund ended the month of September with a return of +2.45%.

Market Review

After more than a year of no rate changes, the Federal Reserve cut interest rates by 50bps. The move was explained by Chairman Powell in three ways: 1) Lack of recent inflation readings higher than Q1 2024, 2) Concern around the slowing pace of job growth, and 3) That a July 2024 25bps cut would have happened if the July employment data was released before the July FOMC meeting. Chairman Powell projected another 50bps cut by year-end. We believe the Federal Reserve has shifted from combating inflation to prioritizing support for a weakening labor market.

In September, global equities were mostly higher. In particular, Chinese stocks experienced one of their strongest months in nearly 16 years following several announcements meant to inject confidence, support a weakening economy, and energize the stock market. A major injection of stimulus from the central bank and promises of more government support mark the beginning of a more aggressive approach from Beijing to propel the economy after years of increased regulation and stagnation.

As the 2024 U.S. presidential election approaches, implied option prices indicate markets may have more volatility, driven by uncertainty surrounding potential policy changes and their economic implications. Investors are grappling with the likelihood of shifting regulatory landscapes, tax reforms, and changes in trade policies, depending on the election outcomes. This unpredictability can lead to increased fluctuations in both equity and bond markets as traders adjust their portfolios in response to polls and candidate platforms. Historical trends suggest that markets often react sharply to election-related news.

The Vice Fund remains committed to its core belief that certain stocks are undervalued because certain factions of society deem them morally questionable. Our core holdings remain military defense, casino, alcohol, and tobacco stocks because they typically have an inelastic customer base that is unlikely to be swayed by whether the product price rises or falls.

Sincerely yours,

Pal Stutte
