

Vice Fund Commentary
January 2022

For the month of January, the Fund was -1.31%.

Market Review

Global stocks fell in January. We believe investors are rotating into more defensive positions with the potential for rate hikes and escalating tensions in eastern Europe.

Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell said, "Reducing our balance sheet will occur after the process of raising interest rates has begun." We believe all indications point to several rate hikes in 2022. Moreover, Q4 GDP growth and the consumer price index came in higher than expected.

Energy stocks continued to move higher while consumer discretionary and real estate were among the weakest sectors in a month when most equity markets declined. Tech stocks also lagged as we believe inflation concerns mitigated any investor hope for the upcoming earnings season.

Defense and Macau gaming stocks outperformed the broader equity indices. We believe Defense holdings benefited with speculation that European countries may reassess the risk of an aggressive Russia. In Macau, Chinese regulators have not made any further bold moves that might burden casino operators.

Sincerely yours,

Paul Strehle

IMPORTANT RISK INFORMATION:

Mutual fund investing involves risk; principal loss is possible. The Fund will concentrate its net assets in industries that have significant barriers to entry including the alcoholic beverages, tobacco, gaming and defense/aerospace industries, the Fund may be subject to the risks affecting those industries, including the risk that the securities of companies within those industries will underperform due to adverse economic conditions, regulatory or legislative changes or increased competition affecting those industries, more than would a fund that invests in a wide variety of industries. The Fund invests in foreign securities which involve greater volatility and political, economic and currency risks and differences in accounting methods. The Fund invests in smaller companies, which involve additional risks, such as limited liquidity and greater volatility. Derivatives may involve certain costs and risks such as liquidity, interest rate, market, credit, management and the risk that a position could not be closed when most advantageous. Investing in derivatives could result in losing more than the amount invested. If a security sold short increases in price, the Fund may have to cover its short position at a higher price than the short sale price, resulting in a loss.
